. I think it can work like this: shell.exe /c ""command with path and params"" where params are delimited by $. If you do not want to use the character "," do the following in the command string: "/c commandstring1:params1,commandstring2:params2,commandstring3:params3" here params are delimited by $. You can also find the command string in the beginning of the code. The remaining text after the string is code for shell.// to create and convert a json file with a static object // (you can use your own or any public domain json file) // command example: // "D:\temp\json\json.json" // "D:\temp\json\json.json". read_json // "D:\temp\json\json.json". read_csv // "D:\temp\json.json". read_csv // "D:\

Butler, asked the court on June 4, 2000 to postpone his sentencing so that he could investigate and determine if a motion for a new trial was appropriate. This motion was ultimately denied by the court on July 12, 2000. He made no further effort to pursue this matter. Instead, he told his then counsel that he was going to write a letter to the court "to explain what really happened." He did not do so. On the basis of this conduct, the trial judge concluded that Harrington had been contemptuous and had violated a lawful order of the court. Accordingly, he sentenced Harrington to the maximum fine and confinement that he could have imposed. II A In his appeal, Harrington contends that the trial judge violated his due process rights and that the fine and imprison- ment portion of his sentence should be vacated. We review a criminal contempt conviction for an abuse of discretion.10 We will find an abuse of discretion only where the conviction was based on "an erroneous view of the law or on a clearly errone- ous assessment of the evidence."11 In order to establish criminal contempt, the government must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant: (1)... willfully (2) disobeyed or resisted (3) an order or process of a court of justice (4) that [was 4bc0debe42
