IColorFolder [Mac/Win] (2022)

IColorFolder is a very easy to use application designed to change the color and the icon of any folder on your computer. Although Windows already comes with some folder customization tools, allowing you to change the icon of a specific folder, IColorFolder does much more than that, all through a very easy to navigate interface. The configuration process is just basic but all users have to do it, mostly because IColorFolder comes with multiple built-in skins and choosing the default one is a must. The main window is very, very simple and shows the currently installed skins, as well as a preview to see the new folder icon. You can also enable the generic folder icon defined in each skin or use one of your own by providing the path to the source folder. Once you hit "Apply" it's all a matter of seconds to change the icon of any folder. Just right click the folder and you have the "Color Label" option that gives you the power to change the color in a matter of seconds. Although it places an entry in the Windows Context Menu, IColorFolder doesn't slow down the computer at all, but we've discovered some problems during our test. While the app works flawlessly on Windows XP, not the same thing can be said about Vista and 7 as it manages to load, but it doesn't make any modifications to your system. All things considered, IColorFolder is a nice folder tweaking tool, relying on a very user friendly interface and basic configuration settings to target all types of computer users. The House is expected to vote this week on a bill that would slash funding for the federal watchdog agency that scrutinizes the government's wiretapping programs. The legislation is sponsored by Rep. Jim Sensenbrenner (R-Wis.), who in March 2005, as chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, oversaw a now-infamous congressional hearing on whether to authorize the U.S. to use wiretapping against terrorists. That hearing was the first in which the National Security Agency was represented by staff, as it is in the current debate. The legislation now before the House would more than halve the $1.4 million budget for the Privacy and Civil Liberties Oversight Board. It would drop the number of staff from nine to three and eliminate office space in the basement of the Library of Congress. The agency also would lose a key Congressional ally. In letters to his colleagues and to Mr. Sensenbrenner,
